is herein enclosed. It will be seen from this report that the Headmaster has been doing a great deal to encourage education among his community.

2. Under the rules framed by the Director for the conduct of hostels attached to Government Training schools for masters the Headmaster of a school is an ex-officio warden and exercise general control over the hostel, the immediate charge of the hostel being left in the hands of a deputy warden, who should generally be a member of the staff, vide the enclosed copies of Director's Proceedings R.O.C.No. 849 A(2) dated 14th June 1928 and of the revised rules. Under the note to rule 7 of the rules, the warden may also undertake the duties of deputy warden in special cases with the approval of the Director. In the present case, the Headmaster of the Governmen Training school for Muhammadans, Bellary was permitted to be in immediate charge of the hostel on payment of a remuneration of Rs.15 a month as the District Educational Officer, Bellary reported that there was no suitable assistant in the school to undertake the duties of deputy warden of the hostel, Vide G.O.No. 108 Education dated 15th January 1929.

The Headmaster also subscribes for the Illustrated Times of India, the Hindu Illustrated Weekly and other English Journals.

In addition to this the Staff and students of the school conduct an adult Education League in a building in the Cowl Bazaar which is lent free of rent by a local merchant. The newspapers and periodicals from the school reading room are sent there after they are finished with at the school and other periodicals are supplied by other sympathisers.

Government Training Schools: Management and Supervision - Revised rules - communicated for a

In the course of an investigation undertaken to revise the rules of the hostels attached to certain Government Training Schools, it was observed that not only were the rules defective in some respects, but the hostels were in most cases not satisfactorily conducted for want of proper arrangements for their supervision and management. The hostel of a Government Training School is, according to the existing arrangement, under the general control of the Headmaster of the school, who entrusts its management to an assistant on the staff. In actual practice, the management is left in the hands of a few students who have an ever changing system of managers, storekeepers and accountants which does not work satisfactorily. Self-management has been tried, and been found unsuccessful, as the average student under training cannot keep proper and regular accounts, and even if he could do it, he could only do so to the detriment of his work as a student. Further, the general control exercised by the Headmaster has not always been found sufficiently effective to prevent irregularities in the life of the hostel members.

With a view therefore to securing better supervision and proper management for the hostel which forms an integral part of the training school and with the object of rendering hostel life as beneficial as possible to the teachers under training, the Director has framed a set of rules for the management of hostels attached to training schools for Masters under departmental control in the Presidency and a copy of the revised set of rules is communicated to the undermentioned officers for adoption in the case of hostels attached to the Government Training Schools under their control.
